El Leon Literary Arts announces the May 2008 release of:

Red Mountain

by Charles Entrekin

This fine, deeply felt novel will have a permanent place in the literature documenting the massive upheavals of those tumultuous times.

—Ed McClanahan,
Famous People I Have Known

Reading this novel, you will feel it as if it were your own life, your own wounds, being lifted up from the well of memory.

—Alicia Ostriker, No Heaven

An absolute page-turner.

—Linda Watanabe McFerrin, Namako: Sea Cucumber and The Hand of Buddha

Red Mountain amazes with its details of early-sixties Birmingham and New York, its immediate, honest voice, and its brilliant, tragic lovers. You will never forget this book.”

—Luke Wallin, Conservation Writing: Essays at the Crossroads of Nature and Culture

A gripping and enlightening read from someone who lived and breathed and wrote his way through one of America’s most tumultuous times.

—Sands Hall, Catching Heaven

Red Mountain shows how we’re all capable of transcendence and self-transcendence, even in the worst circumstances and among our most hectic mistakes.

—Louis B. Jones, California’s Over
